RECOGNITION STATEMENT AND VALUES

Creative communities are happy, healthy communities

They build strong social capital that makes people want to live there, attracts investment and strengthens the community resilience so it's able to survive through changes and downturns. Creative communities foster innovation which enables solutions for a different tomorrow. Creative communities value cultural diversity. Implicitly, this creative community values its aboriginality, its pioneering and pastoralism inheritance, our big open landscapes, its multiculturalism and the contemporary.

Blackall-Tambo Regional Council recognises that through investing in our creative community, it increases the economic and social value of arts and culture. Council knows local government has an important role in supporting arts, craft and cultural activities. It recognises a responsibility to nurture the community's talents; natural and build assets that preserve the history, heritage and environment that so enrich our culture

Promoting, developing and fostering arts and culture is fundamental for community identity which needs to be preserved and shared for future generations making Blackall and Tambo vibrant places to live. Growing artists, organisations and volunteers from the grass roots, and developing strong cultural and community capacity, skills and leadership, the Council intends to be strategic and innovative in cultivating our communities using arts and cultural responses that are close to the hearts of individuals.

It is envisaged that cultural initiatives have the potential to not only provide satisfying employment and regional economic development, but foster an environment where all residents can experience a sense of community, ownership and civic pride.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Building local and using existing was direct feedback during the consultation process and becomes a strong theme throughout the Plan.

An appreciation of current services and rich culture that we have as a community is robustly recognised and defended. This leads to a strong preference to build on local skills and utilise existing services, to take this community forward. In valuing what it has, this community needs a variety of supports and resources to maintain, build and grow existing capacity and service provision, much of the later being supplied in a diminishing pool of volunteers.

Council's continued commitment to become the Arts and Cultural Hub as identified in its Corporate Plan becomes a driving force of this cultural plan. Striving for an all inclusive community approach, this plan identifies and suggests a broad range of linked initiatives to reinforce this focus – detailed arts and cultural auditing, specific plans (i.e. public art) and cultural tool kits, strategic and catalytic investments, specific packaging and signature projects, and innovative means to empower continued cultural deliverance by volunteers and artisan 'storied' products by local creatives. Inclusively and collectively the six visions within the plan will drive positive change for a more vibrant creative culture and community for Blackall and Tambo, which in turn will have social and economic benefits.

The economic imperative over the next five years is for both Community and Council to consider innovative ways of doing sustainable business, of doing more with less. As all governments are contracting the public spend, so to the B-T Council. Collaboration, synergies, efficiencies, better use of existing assets and assisting with building local skills and capacities is the active thread throughout the plan. In considering this and to take opportunities of being able to deliver a plan that supports and grows a creative community; the two major suggestions are a Mayoral Dinner to annually showcase, fund raise and reward cultural deliverance; and explore a Self-Help Model to resource arts and cultural activities and fortify volunteers and the critical services they deliver.

The Six Strategic Visions are

1. Focused and Integrated cultural INVESTMENT - Recognise and develop local social assets, talents and capacity
2. ARTS 4 EVERYONE - Participation and Practice for all
3. COLLABORATION /CO-OPERATION / COMMUNICATION /SUPPORT - Increase Value, Sharing and Synergies
4. PROMOTION AND MARKETING - Elevate, Integrate and Support for consistent, timely communications of cultural happenings
5. ARTS AND CULTURAL TOURISM - Link, Extend and Strengthen
6. ASSETS AND INFRASTRUCTURE - Sustainable and Accessible Community facilities and services to enrich culture and ease arts practice

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of the plan is to create a living document that can be embraced by both Council and Community. Its intention is to develop achievable and simple actions for all parties to deliver. It is focused on 'supporting existing' – the existing physical environment such as facilities and buildings, and the social environment of building capacity of volunteers and organisations to deliver appropriate and relevant projects and services.

Local Governments play an important role in building communities and their social capital, especially in rural areas. Culture and Social Capital is the third and fourth pillars of sustainability (balanced by economic and environmental). Whilst expectedly concentrating on Roads, Rates and Rubbish, the people of this community is the key to its sustainable development, creative community growth and the ability to survive and thrive through adversity. The Blackall-Tambo Regional Council has within this process of developing the Five Year Strategic Cultural Plan shown its commitment to the maintenance and development of its cultural and social capital.

In acknowledging the fundamental importance of community engagement as part of this plan, it is imperative that both communities and local government become drivers and implementers of actions through the next five years to achieve outcomes that build and strengthen communities.

A theme that underpins this plan is that the Art is for Everyone. As a working document for the next five years, the plan is intended to be multilayered so that equal access and recognition is spread across all community functions.

The plan aims to be SIMPLE, ACHIEVABLE AND DELIVERABLE. Through consultation, key areas of opportunity were identified and strategies formulated that considered both strengths and weaknesses of the region. Thus, the strategies within this plan, allow for realistic expectations based on the level of resources available.

Volunteer capacity is critical to these aims. Without volunteers providing many of community and cultural services, small rural communities become less functional. For volunteers to continue providing these critical services, they need adequate support and resources.

Volunteer capacity is currently being reduced. The need for dual incomes mean most people need to work, and their remaining free time is taken by ever increasing modern demands and complexities. Over the last twenty years, we've become increasingly time poor - economic downturn especially our predominant beef and sheep industries, population drift to urban centres, and access to skilled people. This decline is further exasperated by increased accountability for community groups; and now the impact of drought being significant on both individuals and the community as a whole.

The services volunteers deliver is often intangible and goes unrecognized. The community can take these volunteer services for granted, often failing to appreciate the time and effort required in their continued delivery to the community (for no financial recompense). Different government bodies fall short in understanding the amount, depth and importance of this voluntary provision (as it's non-financial, sits mostly outside of council and is presumed passion-led) and hence fail to adequately resource or support these volunteers and their groups.

These factors need to be considered carefully if Tambo and Blackall to retain these valuable services and the great and intrinsic value they bring to maintaining this community. Particularly presently, this voluntary capacity is essential in securing those two pillars, social and cultural, when the other two, economic and environmental is being so depleted and weakened by a once in 100 year drought, depressed beef businesses and a wild dog ravished sheep industry.

For a community to deliver successful social services and outcomes, the drive needs to come from the community, with the support by the Council. Community driven projects ensure that the outcomes are more successful - provides a platform for projects and services to be more relevant to the community, has a significant cumulative effect whereby additional ideas and projects roll off the back of other projects maintaining continual growth and development, and delivers a high level of ownership essential for long term sustainability. Community driven projects that have Council support provide a stronger framework and foundation for this voluntary provision, making them more likely to succeed and grow, and this then strengthens both that voluntary capacity and the community and its culture.

A balanced approach, based on industry partnerships including Council and community and aims to present a plan with strategic visions and actions that can be driven by key stakeholders and interested parties. The community is also experiencing a double edged sword affect - negative change (poor economic climate, loss of population and skilled people and ‘time poor’) and the expectation of having social services that would otherwise be available in larger centres.

This Council-Community Partnership is now even more essential for the Blackall-Tambo Region, as access to social services is highly dependent on an active community and its volunteers, and a Council that seeks to help fill the “gaps” that exist due to isolation or population size. The importance of networks and the reciprocal trust helps to maintain these functions, and it’s these values that need to be understood and nurtured to drive and deliver a successful plan.

‘As such, towns that nurture innovative and creative people are towns that thrive.’

Ian Plowman when discussing his research ‘Innovation in rural Queensland: Why some towns thrive while others languish’ in the Australia's National Local Government Newspaper

BACKGROUND

The towns of Blackall and Tambo constitute the local government area of the Blackall-Tambo Regional Council. A previous cultural plan was prepared for the then Blackall Shire Council, titled 'Dynamic Diverse Direction' and was successfully delivered. Cultural development strategies in Tambo were identified within an "Urban Design Strategy" undertaken in 2005 and a broad "Cultural Strategy" undertaken previous to this. This new plan is prepared mindful of the Blackall-Tambo Regional Council vision – Exploring the Past, Innovating the Future

With the two towns amalgamating, there is a need to develop an up to date strategic cultural plan which both highlights the strengths and opportunities of the Region as a whole, as well as the individual towns. More importantly, the Strategic Plan will provide a working document for the Community and Council to provide direction for cultural development within the Region. The development of specific strategies that have been formulated through the consultative process will enable Council to help deliver relevant and beneficial projects and services to both communities; and to plan for the allocation of its limited resources in a strategic way. Identification of strategies within this plan will provide the framework for the community to seek support from outside bodies and Council, whilst understanding as they take on the role of driver for cultural development, that they will be supported throughout the process.

SELF HELP MODEL

This cultural plan has been prepared recognising the current economic situation that may affect sustainable and achievable delivery. In the current economic and social environment it is recommended that Council in partnership with community explore a self help model that is achievable to maximise resources, expand opportunities to grow the arts through enhancing organisation capacity to deliver continued services.

In terms of a self help model the arts and cultural plan has been designed to encourage strong partnerships between key stakeholders with a collaborative approach to investing in the arts, sharing resources and improved communication between community organisations and local government.

It is further suggested that additional exploration of a self help model be progressed through round table discussions with key stakeholders and service providers to develop and concur to an agreed working model that aims to build skills, grant writing, leadership and business skills. The self help model needs to be driven in partnership between Council and community with agreed supporting roles that grow the arts.

'For most towns, their original purpose has now altered. Unless a community is able to reinvent itself in a contemporary world, it will join the ranks of ghost towns that already litter rural Australia.' Ian Plowman, from his research: 'Innovation in rural Queensland; Why some towns thrive while others languish'

METHODOLOGY

The methodologies and processes engaged local community, artisans and council officers through a nominated focus group, a community survey and through meeting directly with community groups. This was undertaken over a period of four months providing adequate time to inform the community of the project and to gain the information required to formulate strategies.

This methodology is effective because:

- The involvement of council officers and local arts worker in both Blackall and Tambo ensures that the personal networks built through the consultation are lasting and the learning stays in the community.
- Nominating a focus group that is representative of all parts of the cultural sector of both towns will help to refine the issues quickly and assist the team in preparing a survey instrument that gives the wider community a clear context for engagement.
- Meeting community groups on their home turf with a survey instrument means that data gathering can be supervised, a valid cross section of the community canvassed and a credible number of responses assured.
- The multiple ways of gathering information crystallized themes, concerns and aspirations

CONSULTATION

Blackall and Tambo communities were consulted through a number of ways:

- A Community Survey - strategically placed within both towns and given to key arts and cultural people and leaders within the Region; posted out to all households and proffered at the Shows of the two towns. It was also available electronically on-line. (See Appendix 1 for Survey, and Appendix 2 for graphed results)
- Face 2 Face Interviews – undertaken with a wide range of community and cultural groups and key community individuals and leaders; (See Appendix 3 for notes from these interviews)
- Reference Group - assisted the development of the survey forms and provided ongoing feedback to the process and draft plans. Representatives from a wide cross section of the demographic and cultural interests from both towns were invited; and they in turn invited other key cultural participants to become involved. (See Appendix 4)

SURVEY SUMMARY

The survey results have guided the visions for this plan. (Appendices 2 & 3)

Respondents have provided a clear vision of what is important to them as a community and how they perceive arts and culture. Irrevocably, arts and culture is highly important to them as a community participating together, and as individual and group practitioners. Most consider themselves to be quite creative as hobbyists, with many wanting to explore and grow existing and new skills, services, audiences and artisan products.

There is strong interest in a variety of art forms with craft, music and theatre ranking highly. Sport and fitness is highly rated as a favorite interest with performing arts, dance and music close behind.

Community regularly engages in the arts always or sometimes with a high interest in the arts. Reasons people engage in creative art activities are for social activities, personal interest, and enjoyment or to support a community project.

Respondents identified that the major events for community are agricultural shows, horse races, fetes, and the Heartland Festival. Of most importance when attending an event, is that it's a community fundraiser or the activities offered within the time available to people.

Access to information is mostly obtained through word of mouth with email, local papers and public notices as secondary preferences.

The most valued things for community focus on social capital being people, family, community spirit and a sense of belonging/identity. The most highly ranked new services respondents are seeking firmly identified music, plays or community theatre, craft and art workshops.

Respondents ranked the Woolscour, Public Art, Grassland Gallery, and the landscapes as being distinctly unique to the region.

The highest valued heritage development identified the Woolscour, old buildings and cottages, preservation of bush culture such as local early history, and stockmen. Heritage preservation was recognised not only as a contributor to tourism, but also as an important part of the culture that is worth preserving for the community itself.

Community was asked to identify a vision that could drive arts and culture for the next five years with respondents clearly identifying 'BUILD EXISTING, AFFORDABLE AND AVAILABLE' which becomes a primary theme for this arts and cultural plan.

“Art is like chocolate for the brain.” Creativity key to healthy ageing”
Margaret Meagher, U3A Network NSW Conference

ARTS AND CULTURAL IDENTITY

These explanations have been derived from the survey feedback reflecting the interpretations of locals and how they perceive the art and culture in their community. From this feedback the framework of this plan has been created.

ART

As part of the survey, respondents were asked to provide key words that could help to describe ART for their community.

The following themes indicate what art means for Blackall and Tambo:

- Heartland / soul / outback
- Painting / visual art
- Public art / Sculpture / Murals
- Tourism / self awareness / pride
- Singing
- Community art / learning developing skills / united
- Identity / growth / enhancement
- Creativity / learning / expressive / fun Integral / healthy / unifying

CULTURE

As part of the survey respondents were asked to provide key words that could help to describe culture for their community. The following themes indicate what culture means for Blackall and Tambo means the following:

- Heritage / History / Folklore / pioneers / traditions
- People / community / lifestyle / social / culture of togetherness / family / friendly
- Sport / horse riding /
- Environment – weather / fishing / rivers / agriculture / wildlife / bush
- Creativity – expression /
- Innovative / courageous / inventive / excellent
- Age / ability / gender
- Art exhibitions

The term 'cultural' is taken to mean all of the customs and activities which constitute the lifestyle, a sound community spirit, strong sporting heritage, a sense of local identity and the heritage of the predominately rural community. Culture includes the Region's history, design and ownership of public buildings and recreational spaces, community events, visual and performing arts, and all forms of creative activity.

STRATEGIC VISION 3: COLLABORATION /CO-OPERATION / COMMUNICATION /SUPPORT - Increase Value, Sharing and Synergies

Rationale:

- Collaboration between community groups and industry is integral to increase investment value, share limited resources and build capacity
- Young people have to work with limited time to volunteer
- Voluntary input into the arts is limited and lessening because people are time poor and the diversity and complexity of tasks is increasing
- Synergy and reducing duplication of effort

Goals:

1. Improve communication and sharing between community groups and making volunteering enjoyable
2. Ensure cultural collaboration is purpose driven to increase unity and commitment between government, community and business

STRATEGIC VISION 4: PROMOTION AND MARKETING Elevate, Integrate and Support for consistent, timely communications of cultural happenings

Rationale

- There needs to be a more whole of community approach to promoting and marketing arts, craft and cultural activities within the community and to the outside, and this messaging need to be consistent with the arts and cultural hub aspirations.
- Volunteers time and resources are limited, and focused on coordinating and delivering their community event/s, hence they need support with promotion and marketing and this to be done in a timely manner

Goals:

1. Grow events and cultural activities, attendance and involvement by more effectively communicating details to all community members
2. Increase participation and engagement through effective promotion and marketing
3. Increase tourist and visitor numbers and participation
4. Consistent 'arts and cultural hub' message, and 'live' website

STRATEGIC VISION 5: ARTS AND CULTURAL TOURISM - Link, Extend and Strengthen

Rationale:

- The community and Council identifies with Blackall and Tambo being the Arts and Cultural Hub of the region; and this needs continuing reinforcement, detailing and support to stay 'in front'
- Industry partnerships with tourism increases opportunities to engage and grow different art experiences and local creative industries
- The Arts provides additional opportunity to contribute to the growth and diversity of tourism, and hence the local economy
- This tourism then grows the sustainability of local cultural activities, events and creative industries
- Arts Tourism in remote areas is a growing niche which should be garnered
- Arts and Cultural Tourism can widen the traditional grey nomad season, and increase their 'spend' and 'time in town'.

Goals:

1. To grow and deepen the arts tourism experience
2. To develop new industry partnerships
3. Increase product / souvenirs and experiences available to tourists
4. Reinforce Blackall and Tambo as an Arts and Cultural Hub
5. To deliver cultural, social and economic benefit to the community
